STARS IN FEBRUARY.

THE GREAT INCREASE IN THE AMOUNT OF DAYLIGHT. Four Conjunctions of the Moon with Pla ets-Vonus and Jupiter Meet Early

The increase in the length of the day now begins to be perceptible to even the most unobserwing persons. The sun rises earlier and earlier each day and sets later and later, so that the business-man upon returning from his office can enjoy reading the evening news with the same degree of comfort that he scanned his morning's paper, being no longer dependent upon artificial light, says the New York Times.

artificial light, says the New York Times. Although February has only twenty-nine days to the thirty-one of January, the day-light period increases with much greater rapidity, as the sun moves through four degrees more of declination on its way to the equator. When the month closes it will be found that nature is shaking off her lethargy and that her forces are stirring beneath the soil, and soon after there will be glimpees of vegetable life.

The February moon fulls on the 12th. The growing crescent, two days after quartering, is in conjunction with Neptune on the 6th, but as almost three degrees separate the two, the meeting is not one of particular attention. Saturn and the moon are in conjunction three not one of particular attention. Saturn and the moon are in conjunction three days after the full, but the brightness of Lona detracts considerably from the spectacular effect. Two days before her spectacular effect. Two days before her last quarter the waning moon encounters Uranus, on the 18th, and if one were permitted to see the planet in all its glory with unaided vision, one should have a pleasing picture, as the two are less than a degree apart. Mars and then Mercury receive visits in turn, the former on the 22d, and the latter the day of the new moon, on the 27th. The conjunctions for the month are closed by the moon drawing near to Jupiter on the 28th. It will no doubt be observed that the moon and the fairest of the planets have made no appointment for February.

IN CONJUNCTION.

Although the moon does not devote much attention to Venus, the latter is by no means slighted, for early on the morning of the 5th she and Jupiter are in conjunction, and the event that has been promised as one of the most important of the year, as far as celestial tableaus are concerned, will take place the evening before, when the two will be very close together. From what has from time to time been said attention must have been for the past few weeks bestowed upon the two brilliant planets gradually drawing nearer to each other. Language seems utterly inadequate to express the fascinating beauty of the pecries queen of the heavens in her present aspect. Even Sirius, though it surpasses in brilliancy the other suns of space, pales in the presence of the brightest gem that adorns the diadem of night. Her size is increasing, and with it her lustre, until she looks like another moon suspended in the western sky shining with a far more dazzling brightness in the crisp, clear, winter nights than even the moon itself.

She is still oscillating eastward, but will not reach ber greatest distance from the sun for another three months, when she will retrace her course. A careful observer can track the planet's path with almost the same ease that he can follow the movements of the hour and minute-hands on the dial-plate. Her phases, when seen with the telescope, are striking and brilliant. She is a crescent after inferior conjunction, a half moon at elongation, gibbons after that epoch, and her whole disk is illumined at superior conjunction. The apparent variations in the planet's diame-IN CONJUNCTION.

consisting the paper of conjuction. The apparent variations in the planet's diameter are very great, and are owing to the enormous change in her distance from the earth.

The brilliant presence of Juviter would in fixelf be an attraction, but the cast happily contains two stars, and the giant planet has to give way in importance to his more charming companion. The moon in her crescent phase sheds just enough light for the proper effect, and is far enough removed from the scene to be in danger of interferring with the roles of the chief actors. After this meeting, during which the two planets are almost in one, Jupiter will continue to draw nearer and nearer to the sun, until in March the phenomenon of conjunction between the two occurs, and he will be next seen in the early hours of the day, the leader of the morning stars. Some time before this he will, however, become inguifed in the sm's bright rays, so that when he salutes Venus in passing his in reality acknowledges himself vanquished, and leaves her without a competitor as the chief of the galaxy of evening stars. Although it will be impossible to see the two at the exact hour of the comjunction, their appearance on the evening of the 5th will be in every way well worthy unfrequently happens that the two places disagree.

The explanation is, of course, that the star has moved in the interval. Thus the constellations are becoming gradually transformed by the movement of the several stars which form them. It is true that the movements are so slow that even in thousands of years the changes do not amount to much when regarded as a disturbance of the configuration. For example, the movements of the stars forming the Great Bear are sufficiently well known to make it possible to sketch the position of the stars as they were 10,000 years ago, or as they will be 10,000 years hence. And though distortion is shown in each of these pictures from the present lineaments of the Great Bear, yet the identity of the group is in each case preserved.

BIG STORM BREWING IN MEXICO. Puebla, as Well as the Northern Borde

> Ripe for Revolt. (By telegraph to the Dispatch.)

LAREDO, TEX., February 3.—Advices received from the city of Puebla, capital of the State of Puebla, seventy-six miles southeast of the City of Mexico, savs that a financial and commercial crisis prevails there, and that many business-houses have closed their doors. Much dissatisfiaction is expressed with the local and Federal authorities. The Cierical party, which is in a large majority in Puebla, are still sore over the late attempt to drive the monks from their cloisters, and it is said that it the bishop had not advocated prudence the people would have risen emmass and overpowered the troops and the authorities.

masse and overpowered the troops and the authorities.

A correspondent who has been travelling through Northern Mexico says that he found small detachments of men who, at a given signal, will unite at some designated spot on the Mexican side of the Rio Bravo and join the Garza standard. In the meantime they are at work among the ranchmen, who are their friends.

Asked if they counted on money and aid from Americans, they would not speak. The feeling on the frontier is anti-Diaz; though, in the opinion of the correspondent, he is too strong in power to be upset. Money for the rebels is evidently coming from a ring, undoubtedly the cattle barons and mining kings of Northern Mexico, whose headquarters are in New York and Washington, and some of whose members are prominent in politics and finance in the United States. All the bands the correspondent saw were well armed, with abundance of ammunition, but poorly respondent saw were well armed, with abundance of ammunition, but poorly

When asked what they said: rican troops trying to stop them they said: "They are deluded by Diaz agents, who have deceived the American government, have deceived the people. The military the press, and the people. The militar have no heart in this work in favor of Diaz." They added: "Does it not see strange to you that all the United Stat-soldiers here have so far been unable: soldiers here have so far been unable to catch Garza, knowing him to be within ten or twelve miles from hem? Many prominent ranchmen expressed wishes for the success of the revolution, which they say must come, and when shown the strength of the present President the answer was generally a shrug of the shoulders and "Who knows? It is better to die fighting than starving." It may safely be said that the greatest dissatisfaction exists against Diaz, who only rules through the fear of personal violence the people entertain towards him, for Diaz is known to love blood. The business of the whole country is at a standstill.

ANTI-OPTION MEASURES. Hotch Bill a Favorite - Pro

Against Anti-Option Legislation.

(By telegraph to the Dispatch.)

Washington, D. C., February S.—The Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives to-day began its series of hearings on the various anti-option bills pending in Congress. The bill which is most likely to receive the sanction of the House Committee is the one presented by Mr. Hatch, the chairman, defining options and futures, and imposing heavy special taxes on dealers therein.

C. Wood Davis, the well-known statistician of Kausas, appeared to-day in alvocacy of the bill.

Just before the adjournment of the committee H. H. Aldrich, Murray Nelson, and others, representing the Chicago Board of Trade, sproad before the committee a voluminous memorial in opposition to anti-option legislation. The arguments contained in this mesorial are chesty that boards of trade are essential to the marketing of the farmers' produce, and that the dealing in options and interes is a stimulus necessary to the maintenance of boards of trade. They also protest against singling out one like of all visions class or special legislation.

NEW YORK.

Manbattan, Wheeling and Lake Krie preferred, and Lake Shore in the forenoon was more than offset by the heavy selling in the industrials. Atchison, Union Pacific, and Louisville, and Nashville later in the day, attneugh the spurt in the Coalers had a good effect for some time. There seems to be a strong impression that there will be an increase in the dividend on Western Union when the next one is declared, and the strength of the steek is very pronounced, aided by the impression that the Gould interest
